Report: MTA should fix its stations, not expand

Transit. The Citizens Budget Commission warned that the MTA needs to be more creative with its budget.

A subway platform in Queens / GETTY IMAGES

A new report compared the struggle to keep up subway stations with a Greek parable.

The Citizens Budget Commission warned that the Metropolitan Transportation Authority's task to fix and maintain subway stations will be almost impossible without a hard look at the agency's budget, calling it a sisyphean task.

"The MTA should have a credible plan to reach a state of good repair in all of our subway stations," CBC President Carol Kellermann said in a statement. "It's time to think more creatively about how to achieve that."

The biggest challenge, the report argued, remains the $13 billion budget gap in the 2015-2019 plan for big-budget, long-term projects.

The MTA's ability to keep all 468 stations across the boroughs in decent shape — which the transit authority described as being in a "state of good repair" — is a challenge when 33 stations are reported to be in poor shape.

Almost half of those stations are in Queens, the CBC report said. The top rated among them was the 52nd Street 7 train station, the 85th Street J train station and the 30th Avenue N/Q train station.

Among the report's suggested fixes were developing private-public partnerships that would take the burden of the state to pay for certain repairs, as well as the reprioritization of money devoted to expansion back into repairs.

MTA spokesman Kevin Ortiz appreciated the report's analysis but disagreed with the latter recommendation.

"At a time when growing ridership is leading to crowding and delays, we must pursue expansion projects that will accommodate more customers as well as provide new connections and opportunities for our customers," Ortiz wrote in a statement.

The 7 train extension to Hudson Yards will open to the public on Sept. 13, and the MTA is hoping to open the long-awaited Second Avenue subway line by December 2016.

Nick Sifuentes, deputy director of the advocacy group Riders Alliance, told Metro that expansions were important, but "we have to maintain the system that we have, and that should be our top priorities."

Sifuentes added that while the report — which was based on MTA data and doesn't capture straphangers' complaints — only confirmed what New Yorkers already know.

"It basically proves what riders are telling us and we see all the time," he said.

Enough. Gov. begins campaign against campus sex assault

Cuomo / GETTY IMAGES

Gov. Andrew Cuomo threw another punch Wednesday in the battle against campus sex assaults.

Cuomo launched the state's "Enough is Enough" campaign, an initiative that highlights a new law against sex crimes.

"New York is the progressive capital of the nation, and we are proud to take on tough issues like changing the culture and mind-set surrounding sexual violence on college campuses," Cuomo said Wednesday morning at New York University. "That is why this law is so important, and every freshman or returning student should know the rules of behavior have changed. These situations are not just a violation of school policy or ethics: They are crimes, and every student should know they have more rights than before."

Lt. Gov. Kathy Hochul, together with Christine Quinn, a special advisor to Cuomo, will be visiting campuses to distribute informational cards for the program, Cuomo said.

The state police also created the new Sexual Assault Victims Unit to provide assistance to victims of sexual crimes, as well as train schools and local police departments on the new law.

They will use sexual assault nurse examiners to make sure that evidence is well documented and handled properly.

The new law supporting the "Enough is Enough" campaign will require all colleges to adopt comprehensive guidelines, including a uniform definition of affirmative consent.

The law is the first of its kind in the nation and was signed by the governor in July. KARINA E. CUEVAS

Scenes from Queens Night Market; founder John Wang / VINCENT LIM SHOW CHEN; MILES DIXON

Queens Night Market, now with parking

Moving. The founder of Queens Night Market on what's changing and his goals for its new location.

John Wang has had the worst summer of his life.

As the founder of Queens Night Market, he's spent nearly two years getting the kind of real-world experience that business school didn't prepare him for. Over 12 (nonconsecutive) Saturdays since the market's launch on April 25, Wang's dream of an Asian outdoor fair in New York City sometimes leapt, other times lurched ahead.

But the rough start hasn't cooled his enthusiasm for the project.

"People stuck with us and I definitely got better at my job, having never done it before — no room to go but up," says the 33-year-old former lawyer with a self-deprecating chuckle. "We cleaned a lot of things up and got a little bit more organized."

But because this is NYC, that's exactly when it came time for a big change. Wang is moving the night market from its original home in Flushing to Jamaica, reopening this Saturday.

In a way, it's exorcising some old demons. The old location, in the parking lot of the New York Hall of Science, nearly doomed it, with attendance "10 or 20 times more than I ever imagined it would be" and complaints crowding Wang's Yelp and Facebook accounts about parking and traffic jams.

The new location not only has double the space to spread out but will have a lot across the street with $3 parking for visitors. Much of this is thanks to Wang's new allies at the Greater Jamaica Development Corp., who are providing the new home as well as logistics and promotion for the market.

"They have been incredibly supportive since over a year ago. It's definitely no triviality that they're donating the space because that's always been our biggest cost," says Wang. (He was paying $10,000 a night to run the market in Flushing.)

Amid all the changes, there will be some things staying the same. Over half of the 80 or so existing vendors have signed on to continue with the market, though Wang wishes it were more. The new location is less convenient by mass transit and gets less foot traffic, which makes it a different pitch to would-be vendors.

"A lot of it goes back to what we're trying to change — not everyone has a great, rosy perception of Jamaica," he says. "I'm hoping the end result of the Night Market is the same, but the truth is this neighborhood is very different."

He's also trying to recruit more artists, something he didn't expect would be difficult. "I always thought that out of the 150-160 vendors mapped out in our filings, 90 or 100 of them would be art tents.

If you go

Queens Night Market

Saturdays, 6 p.m.-midnight
90-02 168th St., Jamaica
QueensNightMarket.com

I always thought there's so many artists in New York City, getting a huge wave of artists to come through was easy — I was dead wrong. Food vendors always outnumber art vendors by two to one.

"Since I realized that in the first two weeks, I've been campaigning really hard, but it's still something we've been working on. I don't want to be branded just a food event."

A pleasant surprise among all the stress was the realization of Wang's goal with the market. Back in April, he told Metro that he hoped to draw all demographics of New Yorkers to discover something they'd never seen or tasted before at the market. Attendance was in the several thousands every week, but families and community groups began a sort of friendly colonization, bringing strollers and spending their whole evening there.

Quoted

"It's a real opportunity to create something different in the community, change the fabric of the community, hopefully."

Wang

"The tone of the event became much more community-oriented, a real gathering space. People started slowly bringing more picnic blankets and chilling out for hours and hours," he says.

Between constantly recruiting new vendors, sponsors, volunteers and performers, Wang doesn't count on having a free second to reflect on everything that's happened until November (the last day of the market will be Halloween if the weather holds). But he hopes that just as Flushing served to bring many different communities together, Jamaica's Queens Night Market will take on its own sense of purpose.

"It's a real opportunity to create something different in the community, change the fabric of the community, hopefully," he says. "I know that sounds like such an idealistic thing, but in the beginning I never imagined I would get the personal satisfaction of watching it become more diverse and evolve. And that goes beyond just creating a local market."

Washington Heights

Woman fends off would-be assailant

A 33-year-old woman fended off a man who tried to sexually assault her as she walked through her apartment door in Washington Heights, police said.

NYPD is on the lookout for the suspect, who investigators said followed the woman into her apartment building on West 172nd Street on early Saturday morning.

The surveillance video

Cops said the assailant, described only as a black man, followed the woman into her elevator at around 1 a.m. and waited for her to step out of the building.

He then followed her as she opened the front door of her apartment when he suddenly jumped on her and attempted to rape her, officials said Wednesday.

The woman successfully fought her attacker off without any reported injuries, got into her apartment and locked the door behind her. Security video footage of the suspect shows the man wearing a short-sleeve red shirt, dark pants, a baseball cap with a red brim and a backpack.

Prison. Brooklyn men sentenced for Coney Island attack, killing

Two Coney Island men will spend at least the next two decades in prison for their role in an attack on a rival gang that left one man dead and another slashed in the throat.

Testimony at trial revealed Alex "Shorty" Escamilla, 23, and Heiberto "Big Boy" Guerrero, 24, were driving on Neptune Avenue in Coney Island around 2 a.m. on June 4, 2012, when they spotted rival gang members.

They made a U-turn, chased the men and attacked them — Escamilla with a knife and Guerrero with a pipe.

Jose Herrera, 28, died after being stabbed 28 times and receiving 13 blunt-force injuries to his head and face. Angel Reyes, 22, had his throat slashed but survived, according to the DA's office.

Herrera and Reyes belonged to the El Esquadron (SDN) gang, and Escamilla and Guerrero were members of the rival Coney Island Warriors.

"These two defendants engaged in senseless gang violence on the streets of Brooklyn and deserve every day that they will now spend behind bars," Brooklyn DA Ken Thompson said of the fatal attack.

Escamilla was sentenced to 20 years to life in prison on Wednesday after being convicted of second-degree murder, attempted murder, first-degree assault, first-degree gang assault and criminal possession of a weapon in May. Guerrero was sentenced to 21 years after a separate jury found him guilty of first-degree assault, first-degree gang assault and criminal possession of a weapon in June.

London. Hospital releases the identities of HIV-positive patients

The identities, email addresses and HIV statuses of nearly 800 patients were accidentally released by a sexual health clinic in London, England.

The Guardian, which postulates that this could be the largest leak of its kind, reports that the clinic "sent a newsletter on Tuesday that disclosed the names and email addresses of about 780 recipients. The newsletter is intended for people using its HIV and other sexual health services, and gives details of treatments and support."

The clinic has since vowed to investigate how the data leak happened.

The data breach ironically comes from a service called OptionE intended to make receiving treatment for HIV-positive patients more convenient (and presumably, discreet) by allowing patients to get test results electronically and book appointments online.

"I have been a patient at 56 Dean Street since moving to London five years ago and I have always trusted them with my information," a victim of the leak told the Guardian. "OptionE is a service set up for patients who are stable and on long-term HIV treatment. It is designed to make life easier so your results, etc., are sent via email …. I find it impossible to believe that in this day and age this can happen. I was able to scroll down the list and identify the names of a number of people who I knew, some of whom I was unaware of their status."

Hundreds of migrants poured overnight onto the high-speed railway linking Paris with London near the French port of Calais, stranding passengers in darkness aboard trains.

Thousands of miles away, the bodies of other migrants washed up on a Turkish beach. Photos of a drowned toddler face down in the surf spread quickly across the Internet.

Outside a Budapest train station, an angry crowd camped out demanding to board trains for Germany, as Europe's asylum system crumbled under the strain of the influx.

Hundreds of thousands of refugees fleeing wars as well as economic migrants escaping poverty have arrived in the European Union, confounding EU leaders and feeding the rise of rightwing populists.

Thousands of migrants have drowned in the Mediterranean and many others have died travelling over land, including 71 people found in an abandoned truck in Austria last week.

Hundreds took to the tracks around France's Calais-Frethun station, the latest target for those trying to reach Britain, which many regard as a better place to live than countries on the continent.

Rail operator SNCF halted services near the entrance to the Channel Tunnel. Three Eurostar trains were blocked overnight and eventually continued to London on Wednesday, while two returned to their departure stations. REUTERS

Murdoch favorite.
Brooks returns to UK job in big comeback

Rebekah Brooks, the Rupert Murdoch protegee cleared last year of orchestrating a criminal campaign that damaged the British establishment, will return to her old job running the tycoon's British newspapers next week.

Brooks, who worked her way up from the lowest rung on the newsroom ladder to become one of the most influential people in Britain, will resume oversight of The Sun and The Times of London papers on Monday following a high-profile fall from grace four years ago.

Murdoch and Brooks
GETTY IMAGES

With sales at the brash Sun tabloid in decline, Brooks is being brought back to breathe new life into the group.

She will be joined by Tony Gallagher as The Sun's editor-in-chief — a respected journalist and a key figure in the success of MailOnline, one of the world's most popular sites.

"I am delighted to return to News UK," said Brooks, who was dubbed by some as Murdoch's "fifth daughter." "It is a privilege to be back amongst the most talented journalists and executives in the business."

Her return was condemned by critics who questioned Murdoch's judgment in bringing back one of Britain's most vilified journalists who was once depicted as a witch on the front page of a news magazine over her role in a phone-hacking scandal. REUTERS

Baltimore judge: Charges against police in Freddie Gray case can go forward

Baltimore police officers push back a protester. / GETTY IMAGES

Died in custody.
Protests and a day of rioting, arson and looting drew worldwide attention.

A judge on Wednesday rejected defense motions to drop charges against six Baltimore police officers charged in the death of a black man from an injury in custody, clearing the way for a scheduled trial next month.

Baltimore City Circuit Court Judge Barry Williams also rejected a defense motion calling for State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby and her office to recuse themselves from the Freddie Gray case.

Security at the courthouse was enhanced for the hearing, and protesters rallied outside, decrying what they called the militarization of the police. One person was arrested.

Williams rejected the defense contention that Mosby violated her obligation to assure a fair trial when she announced the charges at a news conference as the largely black city of 620,000 people was in turmoil.

Williams said that point would best be settled in a misconduct proceeding, not in his courtroom. He said Mosby's comments did not warrant dropping charges.

"The motion is hereby dismissed," he said before a courtroom nearly filled with reporters and spectators. REUTERS

Five things you need to know

1 FAA names two officials to lead on drone policy

The Federal Aviation Administration on Wednesday named two new officials to lead its effort to incorporate commercial unmanned aerial systems, or drones, into the U.S. airspace.

Hoot Gibson, an aviation expert who has been involved in development of a next-generation air transportation system for the United States, was named as the agency's UAS integration senior adviser — a new position responsible for external outreach, education and interagency initiatives.

A former U.S. Air Force career officer and executive director of the FAA-sponsored NextGen Institute, Gibson will report directly to FAA Deputy Administrator Michael Whitaker.

The agency also named FAA official Earl Lawrence as director of its UAS Integration Office, an existing position responsible for crafting new commercial drone regulations that are expected early next year. Lawrence, who joined FAA in 2010, previously led the agency's Kansas City-based Small Airplane Directorate, which is charged with regulating small aircraft, airships and balloons. REUTERS

2 Six charged in Oklahoma on suspicion of running deadly drug ring

Six people have been charged in Oklahoma with homicide, accused of running an illegal prescription drug ring that authorities linked to the overdose death of a woman last year.

The arrests of three men and two women took place outside of Tulsa and stemmed from the death of Jennifer McNulty, 38, who died after taking oxycodone she purchased from a network of prescription drug dealers. Her son was one of those arrested.

Prescription drug abuse led to nearly 3,200 poisoning deaths in Oklahoma in 2007-2011. REUTERS

3 Texas teen fatally shoots himself while taking selfie

A 19-year-old Texas man who was posing with a gun for a social media selfie photo accidentally shot himself and died from the wounds, Houston police said on Wednesday.

"A witness told police he was taking a selfie with a gun and the gun accidentally discharged," Houston police spokeswoman Jodi Silva said.

The identity of the man killed in the incident in Houston has been withheld pending an investigation by the coroner. REUTERS

Amazon.com Inc. said its "Dash" button, which allows customers to place orders instantly, will now be effectively free.

The company's Prime members can buy the button for $4.99 and get the amount discounted on their first purchase using the button, the e-commerce giant said on Wednesday.

The button will now be available to all Prime members — those paying $99 a year for two-day delivery and other benefits.

The company said it will add 11 more brands to the button, bringing the total to 29. REUTERS

5 Army to open elite Ranger School to all genders

The U.S. Army said on Wednesday it would open its elite Ranger School to all soldiers regardless of gender, after two women made history last month by becoming the first to pass the grueling leadership course.

"We must ensure that this training opportunity is available to all soldiers who are qualified and capable and we continue to look for ways to select, train, and retain the best soldiers to meet our nation's needs," Army Secretary John McHugh said in a statement. REUTERS

Another 57 email threads contain government info

Judge's orders. Nearly 8,000 emails have been released, they are being published in monthly batches.

A review last month by Reuters of previously released Clinton emails found 30 email threads that the State Department has marked to show they include information shared in confidence by foreign government officials, from prime ministers to spy chiefs.

U.S. government regulations examined by Reuters say this sort of information, whether written or spoken, must be classified from the start, and handled through secure, government-controlled channels.

Hillary Clinton / GETTY IMAGES

Reuters found 57 email threads in the latest batch of emails released on Monday that the State Department has marked as including the same type of information.

In all of the 87 email threads examined by Reuters, the State Department has blanked out the confidential information in the public copies, adding the classification code "1.4(B)," denoting foreign government information.

This is the only kind of information that presidential executive orders say is "presumed" to likely harm national security if wrongly disclosed. State Department regulations describe it as the "most important category of national security information" its officials encounter.

If the State Department's markings are correct, it appears that Clinton and her senior staff routinely did not follow the regulations in the department's Foreign Affairs Manual, which tells employees they "must" safeguard foreign government information by treating it as classified. REUTERS

Congress. Obama secures key vote to protect Iran nuclear deal

President Barack Obama on Wednesday secured the 34th Senate vote needed to sustain a veto of any congressional resolution disapproving a nuclear deal with Iran, ensuring the accord will not fail in the U.S. Congress.

Democratic Senator Barbara Mikulski announced her support for the agreement, becoming the 32nd Senate Democrat, along with two independents, to back a pact announced on July 14, which exchanges sanctions relief for Iran for Tehran's agreeing to curtail its nuclear program.

The move means Obama's fellow Democrats will have enough votes to protect the nuclear deal between Iran and world powers in the U.S. Congress.

Their next goal is to see if they can gather at least 41 votes in the Senate to use the filibuster procedural rule to block a disapproval resolution in the Senate and keep Obama from having to use his veto power.

Mikulski / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"No deal is perfect, especially one negotiated with the Iranian regime. I have concluded that this Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action is the best option available to block Iran from having a nuclear bomb ... For these reasons, I will vote in favor of this deal."

Mikulski in a statement

Secretary of State John Kerry gave a speech about the deal in Philadelphia on Wednesday, arguing that its benefits outweigh any drawbacks.

U.S. lawmakers have until Sept. 17 to vote on a "resolution of disapproval," which would weaken the international pact by eliminating Obama's ability to temporarily waive many U.S. sanctions on Iran.

The Senate and House of Representatives are expected to take up the issue as soon as they return to Washington on Sept. 8 after their August recess.

With Republicans virtually united in opposition, Democrats have spent the summer rallying support for an agreement seen as a potential legacy foreign policy achievement for the president. REUTERS

Rocket lifts off to space station

A Russian Soyuz rocket carrying a three-man international crew, including Denmark's first astronaut, roared off on Wednesday from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Kazakhstan, beginning a two-day journey to the International Space Station. The rocket carrying the Soyuz TMA-18M spaceship lifted off to the $100 billion orbiting laboratory, leaving just a puff of white smoke in the sky. The crew is commanded by veteran Russian cosmonaut Sergei Volkov, joined by rookie Andreas Mogensen from the European Space Agency and Aidyn Aimbetov, another first-time space flyer from Kazakhstan's space agency Kazcosmos. ESA dubbed Mogensen "Denmark's Gagarin," a reference to the Soviet cosmonaut and first man in space, Yuri Gagarin. REUTERS

Fall Movie Preview

Summer is over, and it's time to get down to brass tacks — that is, to movies of quality. But autumn is a time of great fruitfulness, and the movies coming out are a diverse lot: not just awards-gobblers but blockbusters, family films, dumb thrillers and Halloween crowd-pleasers. If you're stoked for a big title, may we recommend something smaller with which it might share an obvious — or possibly tiny and probably inconsequential — quality? Here's our guide to the plethora of riches for the next few months. Matt Prigge & Ned Ehrbar

'The Walk'
SONY PICTURES

THE FUN STARTS HERE

'The Transporter Refueled' (Sept. 4) / 'Taxi' (Oct. 2)

Common connection: Cars

Yes, the left field, Jason Statham-less "Transporter" spinoff, starring one Ed Skrein, features automotive mayhem and gunplay and then still more automotive mayhem. But the Iranian drama "Taxi" might, in a way, be more thrilling. It's the third film Jafar Panahi has made in secret after being banned from filmmaking by the government and, like "This Is Not a Film" and "Closed Curtain" before it, it was secreted out of the country. Now that's exciting (and tragic).

'Black Mass' (Sept. 18) / 'The Danish Girl' (Nov. 27)

Common connection: Onscreen transformations for famous actors

Johnny Depp has made such a career of freakish transformations that it's not really surprising anymore — except when he transforms into Whitey Bulger, the balding, understated, middle-aged gangster at the center of "Black Mass." It's a far more unsettling metamorphosis than Oscar-winner Eddie Redmayne's in "The Danish Girl" as Lili Elbe, one of the first trans women to undergo sexual reassignment surgery.

'The Intern' (Sept. 25) / 'Carol' (Nov. 20)

Common connection: May-December relationships

In Nancy Meyers' "The Intern," Anne Hathaway plays a flummoxed young Internet fashion god who finds herself taking old-school (but, happily, not tooooo old-school) advice from a retiree intern, who's played by Robert De Niro. They don't fall in love, though perhaps they should have. After all, that happens in Todd Haynes' period romance, which charts the relations between a young department store clerk (Rooney Mara) and an older housewife (Cate Blanchett) in the 1950s. Now that, then, is progressive!

'Legend'
UNIVERSAL PICTURES

'Legend' (Oct. 2) / 'By the Sea' (Nov. 13)

Common connection: Couples acting together

If you like your drama with an extra meta layer of knowing that the folks onscreen are actually a couple in real life, then watching Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie play a couple whose marriage is crumbling during a luxe vacation in "By the Sea" is for you. Meanwhile, in "Legend," Tom Hardy does some of his best work opposite ... Tom Hardy, as real-life identical twin gangsters Ronald and Reginald Kray — because who doesn't want twice as much Tom Hardy?

'By the Sea'
UNIVERSAL PICTURES

'Stonewall' (Sept. 25) / 'Jem and the Holograms' (Oct. 23)

Common connection: Fan-polarizing trailers

You know what's awkward? Alienating your core audience with the first trailer for your film. That's the obstacle both "Stonewall" (about the 1969 riots that sparked the gay pride movement) and "Jem and the Holograms" (a modern take on the '80s girl rock band cartoon) are looking to overcome, since their first glimpses angered the folks most likely to show up.

'The Martian' (Oct. 2) / 'Queen of the Desert' (Fall)

Common connection: Inhospitable locations

Where would you rather be stranded? On the angry Red Planet with Matt Damon and director Ridley Scott? Or on our planet's own dry spots with Nicole Kidman and director Werner Herzog? "The Martian" has a terminally worried supporting cast, including Kristen Wiig, Chiwetel Ejiofor and Jessica Chastain (doing space drama from Earth once again). But "Desert" has James Franco, Damian Lewis and Robert Pattinson, who now seems to exclusively work with weirdo auteurs.

'The Walk' (Sept. 30) / 'Our Brand Is Crisis' (Oct. 30)

Common connection: Stories already good as documentaries

Does the story of "The Walk" sound familiar? Very, very familiar? If so, perhaps that's because the tale of Philippe Petit, a French acrobat who strutted across a tightrope strung between the World Trade Center buildings, was told in the documentary "Man on Wire," which made millions, won the best documentary Oscar, etc. Now here it is as an unnecessary Robert Zemeckis movie with Joseph Gordon-Levitt. The relatively obscure 2005 doc "Our Brand Is Crisis," which looks at the Americanization of South American politics, makes more sense being turned into a star-studded film, this one by David Gordon Green and starring no less than Sandra Bullock.

'Bridge of Spies' (Oct. 16) / 'Sleeping With Other People' (Sept. 11)

Common connection: Fraught relationships we know will work out in the end

In Steven Spielberg's "Bridge of Spies," an American lawyer (Tom Hanks) battles with a KGB agent (Mark Rylance) over the release of a pilot captured in Cold War-era Soviet Russia. But we know the two will eventually make a connection, just as we know the besties in the rom-com "Sleeping With Other People," played by Alison Brie and Jason Sudeikis, will ultimately stop all that jibber-jabbering and hook the hell up.

'Crimson Peak' (Oct. 16) / 'Rock the Kasbah' (Oct. 23)

Common connection: Charismatic men preying on younger women

It can be pretty fraught out there for a young lady, especially when, like in "Crimson Peak," you're an English author (Mia Wasikowska) whose dashing new husband (Tom Hiddleston) lives in what turns out to be a house of horrors. Just as dangerous? Being a young Afghan singer who earns the attention of a washed-up and stranded rock manager (Bill Murray) who wants to get you on Afghanistan's version of "American Idol."

'Burnt' (Oct. 23) / 'The Green Inferno' (Sept. 25)

Common connection: Food

Hungry? You could watch Bradley Cooper once again try to get his Anthony Bourdain on in "Burnt," which exists in part because no one watched him play actual Bourdain in the "Kitchen Confidential" show a decade ago. Or you could take in the sights of a bunch of environmentalist do-gooders becoming cannibal chow in Eli Roth's "The Green Inferno." Let your stomach guide the way.

'Entertainment' MAGNOLIA PICTURES

'Steve Jobs' UNIVERSAL PICTURES

'Steve Jobs' (Oct. 9) / 'Entertainment' (Nov. 13)

Common connection: Brilliant loners

Aaron Sorkin's latest study of a cold genius bastard is "Steve Jobs" (not to be confused with the doc "Steve Jobs: The Man in the Machine," out this week), which spends nearly three hours looking in detail at three of his biggest moments. Jobs remains controversial even in death, while Gregg Turkington — or at least his alter ego: anti-standup comic Neil Hamburger — is an all-too-divisive figure still walking amongst us. In "Entertainment," the notorious creation gets his own film, and one by filmmaker Rick Alverson of "The Comedy," which has Tim Heidecker also tormenting nice, unsuspecting characters.

'Scouts Guide to the Zombie Apocalypse' (Oct. 30) / '99 Homes' (Sept. 25)

Common connection: Fighting

Sometimes the only answer to adversity is getting your hands dirty — and maybe a little bloody. But "adversity" can take many forms, like the comically violent zombie apocalypse in "Scouts Guide to the Zombie Apocalypse" or the more frighteningly realistic Florida in the post-housing crash in 2010, in which downtrodden single dad Andrew Garfield gets into the wrong side of the eviction game with Michael Shannon.

'Creed' (Nov. 25) / 'Experimenter' (Oct. 16)

Common connection: Testing resilience

In one corner there's the son of the late Apollo Creed — actually named Adonis, and played by Michael B. Jordan — who has to learn to trust his father's former nemesis-turned-friend Rocky Balboa (Sylvester Stallone) as he trains for a fight. In the other, there's social psychologist Stanley Milgram (Peter Sarsgaard), who, in 1961, wonders if his radical behavior experiments can prove that regular people will always obey authority. May the best look at human resilience win!

'Creed' WARNER BROTHERS

'Experimenter' MAGNOLIA PICTURES

'Spectre' (Nov. 6) / 'The Lobster' (Fall)

Common connections: Lea Seydoux and Ben Whishaw, secret societies

"Spectre" features Daniel Craig's brooding Bond finally getting in deep with super-duper clandestine criminal organization SPECTRE (and maybe nifty honcho Ernst Blofeld). But that's not as chilling as the world of another film also touting Bond Girl Lea Seydoux and current Q Ben Whishaw (plus Colin Farrell, Rachel Weisz and John C. Reilly). "The Lobster" depicts a dystopia where the terminally single are forced to mate. If they fail, they're turned into random creatures — a fate more terrifying than that old groin laser from "Goldfinger."

'Peanuts' (Nov. 6) / 'Youth' (Dec. 4)

Common connection: A state of arrested adolescence

Rather than ruin the aura of a childhood fave a la the "Smurfs" and "Alvin and the Chipmunk"'s movies, the makers of the "Peanuts" film appear to have stayed true to Charles Schulz's comic-strip source, spackling it in CGI but keeping the intimacy and, best of all, actual children voicing our leads. They're free to gallivant about like kids — just, as it were, like Michael Caine and Harvey Keitel in "Youth," Paolo Sorrentino's art film-horndog follow-up to his Oscar winner, "The Great Beauty," where the two hit the Alps to carouse (and think about getting old).

'The Hunger Games: Mockingjay — Part 2' (Nov. 20) / 'Brooklyn' (Nov. 6)

Common connection: Girl against the world

If you're in the market for a strong but vulnerable female protagonist, you're probably already lining up for the final installment of Katniss Everdeen (Jennifer Lawrence) fighting for freedom from tyranny. You might also enjoy Saoirse Ronan's Irish immigrant torn between old home and new in "Brooklyn." Oh, and each has a love triangle.

Anthony Jeselnik: 'As edgy as possible'

The comedian is on tour with Funny or Die's Oddball Festival.

RACHEL VIGODA
@rachelatmetro
rachel.vigoda@metro.us

Oddball Festival comes to Nikon at Jones Beach Theater in Wantagh on Sept. 4 and the PNC Bank Arts Center in Holmdel, New Jersey, on Sept. 5. PROVIDED

When it comes to his stand-up shows, Anthony Jeselnik is not willing to make compromises — even if he's performing in front of thousands at a Funny or Die festival.

"I would never accept a job where there are things I couldn't do," he says. "They might recommend things, they might say, 'Try to keep it a little nicer, try to keep it a little less edgy.' But I of course will not do that."

Jeselnik, who you've seen hosting Comedy Central roasts and NBC's "Last Comic Standing," is touring with Funny or Die's Oddball Comedy and Curiosity Festival, alongside Aziz Ansari, Amy Schumer and a long list of other notable comics.

When you're told to tone it down a bit, does that make you want to go even edgier?

I only have one speed. That's to be as edgy as possible. If you told me to be more edgy, it would be impossible. I don't have a plan B — I just have this one thing that I do.

Who do you usually test things out on to see if you're going too far?

Stand-up is so different than asking a friend, "What do you think about this joke?" If you do, it's usually a disaster. They just look at you like you're crazy. You have to find out in front of a real crowd.

Being part of a tour like Oddball versus hosting a show like "Last Comic Standing" — which do you prefer?

A mix of both is necessary because one feeds the other. I'm on TV, so people come and see me when I perform live. And the thing I like about performing live is no one can tell me what to do. I'm my own boss; I have no censors. I can do whatever I want — and you can't do that on television. And Oddball is great because with stand-up, with comedy, you're always on your own. With Oddball, it's a chance for all of us to hang out.

Whose performances at Oddball are you most excited about seeing?

Oh, I won't watch a single performance. I will do my set and then I'll go in the back and read a book.

Alesso talks Electric Zoo: Transformed and how you know you have a hit

The Swedish DJ/producer has the No. 1 dance track on the charts right now with "Heroes (We Could Be)" and is about to headline Electric Zoo. We get him to reveal the secret to his chart-topping success.

EMILY LAURENCE
emily.laurence@metro.us

Swedish DJ/producer Alesso travels the globe playing to thousands in party-ready cities, but he says New York is one of his favorite places in the whole world. The 24-year-old is playing Electric Zoo: Transformed this weekend, and he says he's more than ready.

"I was supposed to play Electric Zoo last year, but it got canceled because of the weather. I was so excited last year, so imagine how I feel now. I can't wait. It's going to be one hell of a show," he says.

The inner Swedish circle

Alesso's current single "Heroes (We Could Be)" is currently No. 1 on Billboard's Dance Club Songs charts and features Tove Lo, a fellow Swede. "Today, yeah, we do kind of all know each other," he says of popular Swedish musicians. "It's a small country, so there's always someone who is a friend of someone you know."

Countries like Sweden, France, Spain and Germany are notoriously ahead of the curve when it comes to EDM, and Alesso says he thinks the reason is that dance music is just ingrained in their culture. "It's something that's always been in Swedish history, but also people here are really focused on getting their music out of Sweden so that it's heard all over the world," he says.

Musical identity

Alesso says he himself has always been extremely driven toward success. "Even when I was only 13, I would have these thoughts like, 'What should I do with my life? Who am I?' I think everyone has thoughts like that, but I had them very early." Music became the identity he was searching for. And he just so happens to have a knack for making hit tracks.

"If it's a really good track, you can tell early on by the basic stuff like vocals and chord progression," he says. "It doesn't matter how much you produce it or change the beat a million times or how creative you get. You can always tell a big record at an early stage in the production."

When Alesso thinks he has the beginnings of a new track, he likes to test it out on his friends and younger sister, who just graduated high school. "She likes everything I do, but I kind of force her to find the one thing she doesn't like. But she's always supportive," he says.

Aries Plan to have fun. An evening spent socializing or enjoying entertainment with friends will lift your spirits. Your quick wit will be popular.

Taurus You will have trouble visualizing your situation clearly. Before you try to place blame on someone else, get your facts straight.

Gemini Do your best to help a relative or friend. Your effort will not go unnoticed, and in the end the reward will be greater than anticipated.

Cancer You may feel lazy, but that's no reason to fall behind on your responsibilities. Make an impression and step up and do what's expected.

Leo There is only so much you can accomplish in a day. Set your priorities and work methodically to finish what you have started.

Virgo An impromptu meeting will spark a creative idea or lead to the rediscovery of an enjoyable hobby. Consider what you favored in the past.

Libra Speak up and offer helpful ideas for increased efficiency at work. Show your leadership ability by touting novel concepts.

Scorpio Contend with emotional issues on your own time. Bringing personal matters to the workplace will detract from your productivity.

Sagittarius Maintaining a businesslike demeanor at work will pay off. You will receive positive recognition if you are precise.

Capricorn Monitor your financial status on a regular basis. Ongoing fluctuations in business and commerce will prove beneficial.

Aquarius You will have answers. Your ability to find resolutions will make you the go-to person, but don't let demanding people get to you.

Pisces Devote your time and effort to a worthy cause. Your sincerity will impress everyone you meet. Embark on a new exercise program. EUGENIA LAST

Last chance Labor Day

Summer unofficially ends this weekend, and so do a lot of the best things the season brought. Instead of crying into your mimosa, check off a few more items from your to-do list. EVA KIS

Museum exhibits

The Met, MoMA, Moving Image

Yes, summer is about being outside as much as possible before winter makes shut-ins of us all, but there have been some exceptional reasons to get to the city's museums. The Metropolitan Museum of Art is keeping the doors open until midnight Sept. 4 and 5 for "China: Through the Looking Glass," ending Sept. 7; the Museum of the Moving Image packs up the sets of "Matthew Weiner's Mad Men" Sept. 6; and MoMA's sprawling "Yoko Ono: One Woman Show" closes Sept. 7.

Curtain calls

On and Off-Broadway

Shore leave musical "On the Town" is ending its run Sept. 6 with a two-week stint by newly minted prima ballerina Misty Copeland. It surely won't be her last turn on Broadway, but it's one worth catching. "John" was sold out through the end of its run Sept. 6 but just added an evening performance that day, so don't miss this ghost story about a haunted stay in a Pennsylvania bed & breakfast. And catch Alex Sharp in the role that earned him a Tony in "The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time" before he leaves on Sept. 13.

Seafood boils

Back Forty & Narcissa

At Back Forty, Sept. 3 and 5 close out Crab-a-Palooza 2015, where $50 gets you a tableful of Old Bay-spiced crab with traditional sides and summer fruit cobbler. The Carolina-style spread ($45) on Narcissa's patio has blue crab, shrimp and sausage, plus hush puppies and carrot cake. (Bonus: The Jamaican Jerk Crab Boil at Miss Lily's 7a — an amazing deal at $38 for a shareable feast of six crabs, sides and banana pudding — was set to end on Labor Day but will continue until Sept. 21 or 28, depending on market availability.)

On the water

City pools and ferry

The weather may still be good, but city pools will close for the season Sept. 7, so get your final splashes in at McCarren Park and soak in the last of the sun from the glorious deck of Astoria Park. (Most city beaches will close Sept. 13.) And while the Riis Park Beach Bazaar may be open until Sept. 27, the easy-access ferry from Pier 11 stops running after Labor Day, so get to the Rockaways this weekend to check out the bazaar. It goes way beyond just eating until you're high on sugar with music and activities like ultimate Frisbee.

For more Labor Day events, visit Metro.us.

Bermuda: In the pink

ALL PHOTOS ROYAL CARIBBEAN INTERNATIONAL

For a place that's just 22 miles long and two miles wide, Bermuda has an incredibly diverse range of attractions.

The name Bermuda conjures up images of pink sand and shorts, but there is a lot more to this tiny island nation than lazing on the beach or a rather questionable sartorial style — so much more that several cruise lines, including Norwegian (www.ncl.com) and Royal Caribbean International (www.royalcaribbean.com), have one-week voyages that only visit the island. Ships sail from the U.S. — usually New York or Boston — stay three nights then head back, giving those on board time to get to know the island.

Beyond the pink sand beaches, the tiny island draws tourists for outdoor adventures.

That's certainly worth doing because Bermuda is delightful. A British Overseas Territory in the Atlantic, some 650 miles off North Carolina, it is a little piece of England in the sun but with a large helping of African culture mixed in. Don't be surprised to find they drive on the left and fly the Union Jack, but the local restaurants serve fish chowder and pawpaw casserole. It's also pretty, clean, friendly and easy to explore by bus or ferry.

The pink sands and clear waters are top of the list for many, but thrill-seekers will find plenty to get the adrenaline pumping, with everything from sailing and caving to cliff jumping and flyboarding, where powerful water jets fire you up into the air. You can dive down to the sunken wrecks and colorful reefs that surround the island without a PADI qualification on a resort course. If that sounds too adventurous, there's scuba diving. It's a cross between snorkeling and scuba, but you can dive to 20 feet as your regulator is attached to air tanks that float on a raft on the surface.

Away from the water, there's hiking and biking — the 18-mile route along the old railway line is recommended, as the roads are busy. Head to the Royal Naval Dockyard to learn about the island's maritime history in the National Museum, shop for local arts and crafts, and try your hand riding a Segway — an upright scooter that's powered by your balance. For a bird's-eye view of the island, there are aerial rides in a single-engine Cessna 172. INSIGHT GUIDES | JANE ARCHER

Top tips

- There are no hire cars in Bermuda, but the local buses (pink to match the sand!) and ferries are safe and easy to use. Travel passes costs $19 for one day and $31.50 for two.
- Take a break from your ship's cuisine to dine with a Bermudian family in their own home. You'll learn to prepare local dishes such as grilled red snapper and BBQ chicken before sitting down to taste your handiwork.
- Cruise ships visit in summer between May and October when the weather is hot and humid. Expect temperatures to average 75–85°F with short, sharp showers.

Seneca Falls: Women's rights and 'A Wonderful Life'

The town in New York's Finger Lakes saw the beginnings of the Women's Rights Movement and inspired the classic Frank Capra film.

The small New York town of Seneca Falls played a surprisingly big role in the women's equality movement. Supporters gathered there in 1848 for the first Women's Rights Convention. It was also the home of leading activist Elizabeth Cady Stanton, and the town's Wesleyan Chapel hosted anti-slavery and political rallies.

At the Women's Rights National Historical Park (www.nps.gov/wori/index.htm), films, displays and documents tell the story of women's struggle for quality, then and now, and how it has expanded to include fighting for civil rights for all on a global stage. Through December, the exhibit "Remember to be a Lady; Forget you are a Woman" looks at the experiences of the WAVES — women in the U.S. Navy — during World War II.

The National Women's Hall of Fame (www.womenofthehall.org) is humbly housed in an 1844 knitting mill and showcases over 300 women in the humanities, sciences, sports, engineering, politics, education, medicine and other areas, most of whom are little known outside (and often inside) their field. It's an appropriate example of adaptive re-use, since most of the people who worked there were women. The 2015 ceremony for the induction of new members is Oct. 3.

PUBLIC DOMAIN

The classic holiday film "It's a Wonderful Life" is set in the fictional town of Bedford Falls. Writer/director Frank Capra visited Seneca Falls often while writing the screenplay, and many of the movie's locations and plot elements seem drawn from those visits.

The Wonderful Life Museum (www.wonderfullifemuseum.com) has photos, props and memorabilia from the film. You can pick up (or download) an illustrated walking tour to sites that inspired the story and setting.

Mets tix in high demand

If you want Mets playoff tickets and don't have an "in," you'll have to at least have some luck. The Mets announced a procedure for a lottery for the right to purchase postseason tickets Wednesday. Fans can go to Mets.com/postseason to sign up for the opportunity to buy potential playoff games that will be played at Citi Field. There is no charge to register, according to ESPN, and no obligation to buy a ticket. Wild card, NLDS, NLCS and World Series drawings will be held separately.

Keys closer to potential showdown with Serena

Tennis. Madison Keys has the look of a champion, even at 20 years old.

Madison Keys has already been heralded by Serena Williams as the future No. 1 player in the world.

For now, Serena is the undisputed holder of that title as she pursues the Grand Slam here at the U.S. Open. But the 20-year-old Keys took one step closer to another showdown with Serena when she knocked off Tereza Smitkova of the Czech Republic 6-1, 6-2 in Arthur Ashe Stadium on Wednesday to advance to the third round.

"It was amazing," Keys said. "I don't know if it's because of the roof now, but it didn't seem as big as I thought it was going to feel. It was amazing to play out there.

"I thought I played pretty well, so hopefully I can have many more matches on Ashe."

Keys will next face the winner between No. 15 Aga Radwanska and Magda Linette. She is 0-4 lifetime against Radwanska but if she advances, Serena could be waiting in the fourth round.

That quarter is filled with Americans, including Coco Vandeweghe (the niece of ex-Knick Kiki Vandeweghe), Bethanie Mattek-Sands and Venus Williams.

"I think I have always kind of struggled with Radwanska's game a little bit," said Keys, who lives in Boca Raton, Florida. "She just seems to always kind of get that extra ball back. I think going into that match [I need to be] just a little bit more patient but still going for my shots."

Keys hired former world No. 1 Lindsay Davenport as her coach and then made a major breakthrough at the Australian Open in January when she reached the semifinals before losing to Serena in straight sets.

"It was an honor for me to play someone who will be No. 1 in the future," Williams said after the match.

Keys followed that performance up with runs to the third round at the French Open and the quarterfinals at Wimbledon. On the year, she is now 26-14.

"It's great stuff," Paul Annacone said on the Tennis Channel of the Americans' success. "Between the men and the women, that talent pool is getting deeper. The deeper the pool the more likely you're going to have great players."

Keys could be that next great American player in the post-Serena/Venus Era. But in order to get another shot at Serena, she must get past the next round.

"It's so special to be able to get as far as I've ever been at this Open," Keys said. "I'm excited to keep it going and try to get to the next round.

NCAA football

Rutgers eyes another bowl berth

Rutgers football defied all conventional wisdom last year by racing to an 8-5 record in their first season in the Big Ten. There was a narrow loss to Penn State, some very solid wins — including one over Michigan — and a tremendous road comeback in their season finale at Maryland. Then there was the bowl win, a solid thumping of North Carolina.

It will be tougher this year for the Scarlet Knights, who not only lost four-year starting quarterback Gary Nova to graduation but now play the likes of Penn State, Michigan and Wisconsin on the road. Getting to six wins to ensure a bowl game will be a challenge.

Then again, the same thing was said last year and the team exceeded expectations. Where the program goes in 2015 will rely heavily on wide receiver Leonte Carroo, who returns for his senior season, as well as the play of a revamped secondary that should be much better than last year's unit. They open the season this Saturday against Norfolk State.

Hayden under center

In part because of a suspension to Chris Laviano, it will be Hayden Rettig who starts at quarterback for Rutgers this weekend. It has been a stiff quarterback competition between Rettig and Laviano this summer but Rettig came on strong and will capitalize on the fact that Laviano is suspended for the first half of the Norfolk State game for violating a team rule. He'll get the start and the chance to show off his cannon of an arm.

Rettig is a former four-star recruit and a U.S. Army All-American who transferred from LSU last year and had to sit out the year, per NCAA rules.

"It's one of the difficult things for a player who transfers at that early stage," Rutgers head coach Kyle Flood said of Rettig. "You spend a year on a scout team at one place, and then you go to another place and you are still ineligible. So you have to spend another year on the scout team.

"Hayden is really excited. He's working really hard and I have a lot of confidence in him and so does the football team."

Blessuan Austin

One of the big names to emerge this summer in camp is Blessuan Austin, a freshman who was lightly recruited in high school but has likely earned a starting job at cornerback. And given how poorly the team did with their pass defense last year, his emergence could be huge for the team.

He has a long frame that is perfect for lining up opposite Big Ten receivers.

"We are excited about him," Flood said. "This is a big challenge for him. There's an evolution of a football player that happens, and fortunately we had him here in January, so he was able to start that a little bit earlier than some of the other first-year players. KRISTIAN DYER

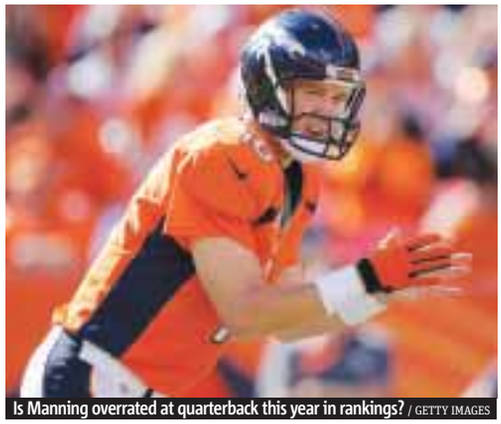
ARE MCCOY, MANNING TOO EXPENSIVE?

Average draft position, also known as ADP in the language of fantasy geek, is the vein that pumps blood through our selections. We need a clear understanding of where players are going to go — and if they're worth that price. Travis Kelce is a perfect example. It's very easy to see he is a Gronkonian beast on his way to a breakout year. Because that's so clear, you'll likely need to use a fourth- or early fifth-round pick to secure him. I think Kelce is worth that price, but his ADP leaves a lot of room for debate. He's clearly not a sleeper. Heading into Draft Week, realize that what our opponents think of players matters just as much as what we think of them. Here are some very good players who are simply too expensive:



Is Manning overrated at quarterback this year in rankings? / GETTY IMAGES

Slim Shady

LeSean McCoy is a naturally gifted runner on track for 300 carries. Normally, that's a formula for a strong second-round fantasy pick. But McCoy is draped in red flags that make him a risk. First and foremost, he was awful throughout the 2014 season, getting outplayed by Darren Sproles and losing late-season goal-line work to Chris Polk. That was in spite of playing in a RB-friendly Chip Kelly scheme and running behind an elite offensive line. Now McCoy will have to deal with one of the league's worst o-lines and plays for a team that projects to be among the league's worst in red-zone opportunities.

Wrong Manning

Would you rather have Peyton Manning in the fourth round or Eli Manning in the ninth? Before you answer, go back and watch Peyton over the final two months of last season in addition to this preseason. Then think about a new Gary Kubiak scheme that is going to emphasize extreme balance. Meanwhile, Eli projects to sling it in shootouts thanks to a brutal defense and loaded offensive weaponry. Peyton's ADP is so high only because of his name.

Finish line in sight for Yanks, Mets

MLB. The Yankees and Mets are both firmly in the mix this Labor Day weekend.

Luis Severino has a 2.17 ERA this season. / GETTY IMAGES

The pennant-contending Mets and Yankees go into Labor Day weekend looking to pick up wins over divisional opponents that are both realistically eliminated from the postseason.

Luis Severino gets things started for the Yankees on Friday night; the young phenom turned in his best start to date when he cruised through six scoreless innings in Atlanta last weekend. Severino seeks his third straight win after getting two losses and a no-decision in his first three major league starts. Jake Odorizzi counters for the Rays. The Bombers have been relatively successful against Odorizzi; Brian McCann has 10 hits in 16 at-bats against him, including two home runs.

Jacob deGrom takes the hill for the Mets on Friday against the Marlins, who are just trying to avoid finishing in the NL East cellar this season. DeGrom bounced back from a rough outing against the Phillies with a solid six innings against the Red Sox that saw him strike out 10 batters. Tom Koehler starts for the Fish, and he has really struggled as his team continues to sink. He has lost seven starts in a row and his ERA has skyrocketed from 3.16 to 4.12 in that span.

Plans are still in flux but it looks like Bartolo Colon will get the start on Saturday on regular rest. Colon pitched eight innings of shutout baseball in a win against the Phillies on Monday, upping his record to 11-1 against NL East opponents this season. Southpaw Brad Hand counters for the Marlins.

The slate

Probable starters for this weekend:

- Rays vs. Yankees Friday - Odorizzi/Severino; Saturday - Karns/Eovaldi; Sunday - Archer/Nova
- Mets vs. Marlins Friday - deGrom/Koehler; Saturday - Colon/Hand; Sunday - Matz/Narveson

Someone had wished I wouldn't marry the man I love... Thanks to Anna we are now happily married!

HUSBAND & WIFE
Our business was failing, we had no hope until my husband called Anna for help. A few days later we started to see amazing results!

FAMILY
We have been married for six years and had no children. Thanks to Anna we now have two healthy kids.
